Area of research: Business Law and Insurance Law

Before being in charge of the supporting unit in School of Law, Assumption University, in 1997, Ajarn Nachatcha has formerly worked for almost five years as a human resource manager in a construction company in Thailand after her graduation. With her passion to pursue another degree in law, she later on decided to enter law school in 1997, successfully obtained her LL.B. in 2001, her master's degree in business law in 2005, and a Thai bar degree in 2008. Because of her interest in insurance law and law of succession, she subsequently was assigned to be a responsible lecturer in the subjects and has engaged in several researches in the fields.

Due to her extensive experience in the area of law and management, she later was appointed to work as an Assistant to the Dean for Administrative Affairs in Thomas Aquinas School of Law being responsible for all administrative matters and internal management.
